brown boots to carry out the color scheine.

Miss Isabel Hay, the sister of this inuch-entered visitor, is also wearing brown in its highest terms. Her ultrasmart cheviot, of great severity, has a waistcoat of deep yellow silk, heavily embroidered in brown silk, with which sie wears a soft brown velvet hat an a neckpiece of sable.

Mme. van Swinderin, the former Miss Glover, now residing in London, where her husband is minister from the Netherlands, is modish and gracefol as ever in a tailored suit of rough cloth in one of the new dark red tones, with which she wears sables and a very becoming round stiff hat of dark velvet, with its high crown encircled in small, gay little hlossoms. Mme. van Swinderin and Mme von Rath are to remain through the season with their respective parents.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, pouring teafor Mrs. Seiden P. Spencer, and Mrs.
Hare Lippincott, performing the same friendly service for Mrs. Marshall, were models of elegance in afternoon tollets of gold-brocaded satin, Mrs. McCormick's having a blue background, Mrs.
Lipincott's black.

The blue gown was the more elaborate, inasmuch as the free side panels of the redingote were finished in deep hands of gray fur. There was also a waistocat effect of plain blue satio, with square neck. The sleeves were long and close. With this Mrs. McCormick wore a small English shaped hat, completely covered from from to back
by one rich flat plume of ostrich matching the blue of the gown.

Mrs. Lippincott's gown was a draped model, unrelieved by any trimming,
with close curved bodice, square neck
and half-length bell sleeves.

odice, square nec and half-length bell riesves.

The bodice showed a surplice line which called for a small vestee of white net Mrs. Lippincott's hat was small, but rather high in the crown

Miss Augusta Glass in her brief career as a cabinet girl has won such universal favor as an assistant at afternoon receptions it is earnestly hoped that as a senator's daughter she will continue this friendly service to any hostess who wishes her days to be a success. Miss Glass when assisting Mrs. France, of Maryland, wore a becoming afternoon gown of dark blue satin with tunic overdress of baige color georgetts topped by a becoming little blue satin hat

Mrs. John H. Hewson, who is as us Mrs. John H. Hewson, who is as usual dividing the winter between Washington and Florida, wore to a very recent dinner party a charming gown of new pale blue made with slightly draped skirt, a squire train with the bodice completely covered in fine sequins shading from the blue of the gown to mauve and pink tones. The gown was on the new redingote line as regards the back with the sequins extending far below the hip line.

A Most Gratifying Error

In yesterday's paper through an error our name was omitted from our "Dollar Day" page advertisement.

Nevertheless, the response was beyond our control-which demonstrates most forcibly how little there is in a name-and how much there is in consistent, honest value-giving.

We venture to say that three-fourths of the people who read the page announcement in both afternoon papers never noticed that BRY'S signature was lacking; on the other hand, from the response accorded this nameless advertisement, we feel justified in saying that the public immediately connected the unusual values with BRY'S.

We accept this as a most flattering compliment to our store policy and past performances, and assure you that it offers us additional encouragement to accomplish greater achievementsfor which we thank the good public of Memphis and surrounding territory.

Ah, What's in a Name!
